Editor's Column

Tonight we will all greet 1965 in our chosen ways. Ahead of us will be a new year in Carmel . . . an eventful year if all the plans made during 1964 come to fruition.

The achievement of these plans during the coming 12 months will require much community effort. So let us all resolve, this evening, to give a little time . . . and there is nothing more valuable in life than time . . . to making Carmel an even more beautiful and desirable place in which to live.

May each and every one of you find happiness during the precious 365 days, 8,760 hours and 525,600 minutes of 1965. And may the weatherman resolve to end his 1964 weeping and let the sun smile upon us again. M.L.

BUS SERVICE HEARING

All persons to whom curtailment of bus service between Carmel and Monterey is of interest will have an opportunity to express their views on the matter at a public hearing to be conducted by the California Public Utilities Commission on January 7.

John A. Rowe Jr. will be the PUC examiner who will preside at the hearing which will be held in Few Memorial Hall at the corner of Madison and Pacific streets in Monterey starting at 10 a.m.

The hearing is required because the Bay Rapid Transit Company has asked the PUC for permission to eliminate some existing evening and weekend bus runs between Carmel and Monterey.

BIKE LICENSES

Police Chief Clyde Klaumann says Saturday is the day to start buying new bike licenses . . . 25 cents each at the police station.

Carmelites To Greet New Year At Parties

New Year's Eve is the time for old friends and families to join hands and sing Auld Lang Syne, to give a backward glance to the year past, and a cheery toast to the twelve months ahead. Many Carmel homes will be lighted with the doors flung wide—tomorrow as well as tonight.

Ray and Judy Ramsey will entertain at cocktails from seven to ten o'clock tonight.

New Year's Eve open house at the Church Chappell's home in Pebble Beach is fast becoming a gay tradition—a happy must on the calendars of their host of friends.

The Winston Elstobs will have open house tonight. The senior Elstobs, Fred and Carolyn, will take off the very early hours tomorrow morning to spend the holiday with the Walter F. Tituses in Hillsborough and the balance

The Past Year In Carmel

The most important event of 1964 in Carmel appears to be the purchase of Sunset School for a municipal cultural and community center. However, lots else of note took place during the past 12 months.

Trees, art, music, theatres, planning and parking received considerable attention. There was a municipal election and beer on the beach was banned. A "public sales" operation flourished amidst adversity. Juvenile delinquency shocked the town and a bandit was the cause of a gunshot hole in the library floor. Taxes rose, also salary schedules. Churches, civic organizations and youth groups flourished. Sand castles were built along the shore and townspeople went to the beach to celebrate the Fourth of July. Annexation was a hot issue.

Below is the chronology of highlights of 1964 in Carmel.

January

The Carmel Presbyterian Church celebrated the first decade of its existence in January, 1964.

This month, too, Mrs. Isabel Tostevin, new president of the Carmel Business Association presided over her first executive board meeting.

The Committee for a Creative Arts Center in Carmel was formed in the first month of 1964. Mrs. W. E. van Loben Sels was chosen chairman of the group which proposed a $1,900,000 development on the Sunset School site, should it become city property. The proposal was to finance buildings with privately donated funds at no cost to the city, then turn the developed center over to the city when it was paid for.

The Rhyming Philosopher

By Harry W. Fletcher

No. 83

There's no time like the present to commence a new year,
Who cares if you want to or not?
For it's hard to be absent — since you're already here,
Which places you right on the spot.
You can postpone deciding, you can wish for the moon,
But, sooner or later, my friend,
You must come out of hiding some fine morning or noon,
And face what you must in the end.
Now you can't ride the buses without paying your fare;
And the food that you eat must be bought.
While regardless who fusses, or what oaths you may swear,
A fish is not your's 'til it's caught.
And the same goes for women — be
she blonde or brunette
Or redhead—she just has to choose.
You stay dry or go swimmin' — you select what you get,
And that's how you win or you lose.
We admit life's a gamble, but just play your cards straight;
Don't bank on the turn of the wheel.
If you're slow in the scramble, never blame it on fate;
Push harder and make your own deal.

Norberg To Protest Commercial Zoning Near Mission Fields

Monday morning—at 10:30 o'clock—the Monterey County Board of Supervisors will hold a public hearing on a proposal to create commercial zoning just across Highway One from Mission Fields on land extending from Carmel River to the entrance to Carmel Valley.

"Anyone wishing to oppose this zoning, as I do, should go to the county courthouse to express views on the matter. Anyone not able to go should, at least, send a letter or telegram addressed to the supervisors," Councilman Gunnar Norberg advises.

Planning Director Floyd Adams will convey to the supervisors the objections of the Carmel Planning Commission that this rezoning was not submitted to the local body before it was acted upon by the county planning commission. The area is within Carmel's zone of advisory influence.

Rear Admiral C. W. Fisher (USN Ret.), president of the Carmel Citizens Committee, on behalf of the association's board of directors, plans to speak at the rezoning hearing.

Colonel George A. Brown (USA Ret.), president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, plans to ask the supervisors, in writing, to delay action on Monday so that the rezoning may be carefully studied.

City Purchases Sunset School

Tomorrow the City of Carmel will own the Sunset School buildings and two-block site—and the Carmel Unified School District will pay $2,000 a month rent until the school premises are vacated on June 30.

The $550,000 purchase and $12,000 lease transaction took place yesterday afternoon in Sunset auditorium with members of the city council and board of education seated on the stage.

Mayor Blanks handed Dr. Robert E. Newton, chairman of the school district's board of trustees, a check covering the purchase of the school for a municipal cultural and community center.

"This check," Mr. Blanks said, "represents the faith of this community in itself and the nation—that Carmel will retain its identity as a place where the arts flourish."

He added that "The city council takes more than the title to this piece of land as the deed to the Sunset property fulfills the hopes of Carmel and the greater aims of the community at large."

In accepting the check, Dr. Newton stated that the district would use the money to provide "a more adequate and flexible educational plant" for the school district than outmoded Sunset School.

Leslie L. Dewar of the Coast Counties Land Title Company carried the $550,000 check away from Sunset auditorium. At the end of the legal escrow period, Mr. Dewar's firm will give the school district its money and the city six months rent for the school in a lump sum. Costs of the sale will be born equally by the school district and the city.

Both the city and the school district will invest their proceeds. The district will put $500,000 "in bonds, notes, bills and certificates issued by the United States" as this sum is not "required for the immediate necessities of the district."

The city will place its rent proceeds in the municipal time deposit account until the money is needed for development of the center. The school district will carry public liability insurance on the school until June 30. The city will add Sunset to its fire insurance coverage of municipal buildings.

A $575,000 bond issue to finance yesterday's purchase was approved by Carmel voters in April. This bonded indebtedness will be repaid over a 20-year period by a portion of the city's receipts from the four percent hostelry tax.

Prior to the joint meeting of school district trustees and the city council, each body met separately. The council passed the necessary purchase and lease resolutions in city hall then adjourned to Sunset auditorium where the school board had passed required sale and lease resolutions.

It was of interest that the Mayor's wife, Mrs. Roxanna Blanks, sat on the same platform as her husband. She is a school district trustee. Observing the transaction were Medill Bair, Superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District, Orville Rogers, principal of Sunset School, City Attorney John Morse, Police Chief Clyde Klaumann, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Adrian Bennett, a former member of the Carmel board of education who now lives in New York State, and City Auditor Arthur Plaxton.

It fell to City Clerk Hugh Bayless' lot to read, twice, the city's resolutions and its lease with the district, first in city hall and again in the school.

At the end of the transaction, Mayor Blanks praised Frank Putnam and Councilman Eben Whittlesey, both former Mayors of Carmel, for their foresight and vision and the part they took in the negotiations which led to yesterday's transaction. He lauded, too, Steven Sassoon and Clayton Neill Jr., school trustees who took part in the negotiations, also a former trustee, George Yates.

Council To Act On Annexation Petitions Wednesday Evening

First item on the January 6 agenda of the city council will be a public hearing at 8 p.m. on the extension of the interim ordinance requiring off-street parking for employees in any new developments in the business zone.

The council will also act on a resolution to allow residents of Mission Fields, portions of Hatton Fields Mesa, and the Walker and Mission tracts to circulate annexation petitions.

At the request of the Monterey Peninsula Educational Advisory Committee, the council will discuss need for a Monterey Peninsula College program to train municipal employees.

The employment of Charles Grimshaw as a fireman and the claim of Jack Herron for reimbursement for cleaning a suit will be on the agenda. Mr. Herron was splashed by tar during street resurfacing.

On the council's tree tour meeting on January 5 a request from Carl E. Welchner to remove a tree on Palou Street in order to build a garage will be considered.

ROGER ELLIS STILL IN CRITICAL CONDITION

All Carmel is concerned about Roger Barrie Ellis, 17, the son of Carmel Police Captain William Ellis and Mrs. Ellis, who is still in critical condition at the Community Hospital. Roger suffered multiple injuries in a car accident on the Pacific Grove cut-off on Monday night.

He was a passenger in a light rear-engine car driven by Robert Edward Saulsbury of Carmel. Charles Michael Kramer of Carmel was also a passenger.

The Saulsbury car skidded into the path of a car driven by Nancy Reeve of Sacramento. All four young people were taken to Community Hospital by ambulance.

Robert Saulsbury was released from the hospital yesterday; Charles Kramer is well on the way to recovery; Nancy Reeve is also showing improvement.

(Later in the year this group disbanded.)

The 1964 Crosby Golf Tournament ended in the [illegible] and rain of a record January [illegible] which caused considerable damage in town.

Also in January 1964: Bion Burchell was installed as president of the Carmel Board of Realtors; Leonard Heller was elected president of the Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the American Federation of Arts; Rear Admiral C. W. Fisher again was named to head the Carmel Citizens Committee at its fourth annual meeting. Jack J. Miller and Francis Sparolini proposed to build a 16,000 square foot development including a new theatre at the corner of San Carlos and Eighth. (Parking requirements held up construction of this development all year.)

The Carmel architectural firm of Elston and Cranston was selected by the Carmel Unified School District's board of trustees to design a large group teaching facility for Carmel High School in January.

February

In February 1964, candidates for the Carmel city council race filed nomination papers. They were Eben Whittlesey, Joseph Danysh, Stephen Grant, Paul Hazdovac, Gunnar Norberg, W. C. Phelps and Roland W. Scheffler. Three filed for the position of city treasurer — Sam Coleman, Harry Hilbert and Speirs Ruskell. Hugh Bayless was the only candidate who filed for city clerk.

The same month, the city council passed an interim ordinance demanding, under certain circumstances, that off-street, on-site parking be required for new business district developments.

March

The city was enriched in March of last year by the hundreds of seedling pine trees which the Carmel Forestry Commission gave away on Arbor Day. Citizens picked them up at the post office parking lot. Purpose of the project was to reforest private property in Carmel.

The city council decided in March to place the purchase of Sunset School on the April municipal ballot. Price of the facility which the city proposed to finance by a bond issue was $575,000. (The Carmel Unified School District had decided to sell the 2.9-acre site and its buildings because they were no longer suitable for school use.)

The council took the Sunset action after receiving a report in March from Stone and Youngberg, the city's financial advisors on the school purchase. This report stated that the purchase of the school by the city was financially feasible.

During March, the board of education of the Carmel Unified School District approved a salary schedule providing pay increases for teachers. This month, also, the Monterey County Symphony Junion Orchestra made its debut in Sunset School auditorium. John Gosling directed the 53 young instrumentalists.

Kites flew on the high school football field during the 33rd Carmel Kite Festival in March. The city council, this month, named Floyd Adams as director of planning and named Richard Thomas to fill his former position of building inspector.

April

In April, the city council decided to beautify Junipero Avenue from Ocean to Fourth using gas tax funds received from the state. The council also decided to update the city's electrical code.

Police Chief Clyde Klaumann was elected vice president of the California chapter of the F.B.I. Academy Association in April.

And then there was the municipal election. Councilmen elected in April were Eben Whittlesey (1,216 votes); Gunnar Norberg (848 votes); Stephen Grant (752 votes). Sam Coleman was re-elected city treasurer and Hugh Bayless became Carmel's city clerk.

In the same election the $575,000 bond issue to purchase Sunset School was approved by a 1,220-169 vote.

The week following the election, city councilmen chose Herbert Blanks to be the new Mayor of Carmel.

For a brief time during the same month, the Carmel bulletin board was lost and found. (It later relocated near the post office.)

May

In May of 1964 the city council and residents were alarmed about a brown blight on trees along Scenic Drive. Mayor Blanks sought expert help from the University of California and the State Division of Forestry.

On Mother's Day, Pierre Salinger took time off from the U.S. Senate race in California to come to Carmel and spend the day with his mother, Mrs. Jerome Carlson.

An unhappy event in May was the arrest of four Carmel High School seniors. These boys were implicated in the theft of innumerable articles not only in Carmel and Carmel Valley but as far away as Yosemite, Corralitos and Garrapata Canyon.

As a result of this, Mayor Herbert Blanks, with the approval of the city council, set up a committee to investigate ways and means of preventing juvenile delinquency in this area.

A happier note in May was the concert given by members of the Carmel High School Band to raise funds to buy new uniforms. This affair took place at Sunset auditorium. (By September, new uniforms arrived as the result of community aid.)

June

In June, Clifford Cook repossessed the Carmel Pine Cone and again became the paper's publisher with Marjory Lloyd as editor.

The city council passed a controversial ordinance in June. This was the law prohibiting the possession of alcoholic beverages on the beach. The "beer ban" was unpopular but necessary because of littering and unpleasant incidents on the beach.

Also in June, city employees were given a four percent cost-of-living wage raise; Mayor Blanks appointed Dan Yurkovich, principal of Carmel Junior High, to head the permanent committee on juvenile delinquency. This was done following a symposium in city hall when authorities on youth made it plain that the responsibility for preventing juvenile delinquency rested on the shoulders of parents.

The blight on trees along the ocean front was discovered in June to be salt burn caused by weather conditions. This was the month, too, that the Church of the Wayfarer's new pastor, the Reverend Lawrence K. Whitfield came to Carmel and All Saints' Episcopal Church blessed the Carmel Valley site of its new day school.

On June 3, the calm of the Harrison Memorial Library was shattered by gun shots when Police Officer Edd Fischer, aided by Malcolm Steele and Arthur Hull, subdued a bandit. The young man, Gary Michael Clark, managed to gain possession of Officer Fischer's revolver which was discharged during the resulting scuffle. Clark had held up the Derek Rayne clothing shop and attempted to hold up the Sprouse-Reitz store before he took refuge in the library.

Dr. R. A. Kocher retired in June thus ending 40 years as a practicing physcian in Carmel. Marjorie Wurzmann was re-elected president of the Carmel Music Society during this month and Clyde Klaumann Jr., sixth grade teacher at Sunset School, was selected to attend a summer session at Harvard University.

Another June happening was the appointment, by the Mayor,

The Story of The Little Bank That Grew

× × × × × × × × ×

From Tiny Shack in Rear of Real Estate Office, Security Bank Starts 76th Year in Five Branches

Downtown Carmel Branch Opens January 4th, and Pacific Grove's New Enlarged Building Addition Features Ribbon-Cutting Ceremony On Same Day

Now that Carmel will celebrate on January 4 the opening of its first local independent bank to be established in 41 years, with 90% of its stockholders residents of the Monterey Peninsula, it is fitting to review the history of this bank's rise from a one-room shack to a five-branch local institution under the direction of William A. Burkett, a man who has been accorded a prominent part in California's history since at the age of 39 he was the first man to be invited by California Governor Goodwin Knight to serve in his cabinet, which service included being Chairman of the State Department of Investments, Chairman of the Employment Stabilization Commission, and State Superintendent of Banks.

As a salute and tribute to Security National Bank's 76th year, and especially to William A. Burkett as head of Monterey Peninsula's only home-owned bank, local writer Walter C. Marshall has compiled the following profile:

Early Beginnings of Little Bank That Grew

By Walter C. Marshall

Back in 1889 the little Bank of E. Cooke Smith, fortified with two employees and $50,000.00 in assets, opened for business in the rear of a real estate office in Pacific Grove.

The bank grew slowly during the gaslight era of the eighties, when Teddy Roosevelt was President and Victoria was Queen and it progressed slowly on through World Wars I and II. Only after 72 years had its assets climbed to two million dollars and its personnel increased to five. It's name, however, was changed to the Security State Bank of Pacific Grove.

During these years following the war, the big San Francisco chain banks were busily engaged in buying up all of the independent banks in Monterey County, and tempting offers were made to the Security State Bank. By 1960, therefore, the little Pacific Grove bank was the county's only remaining home-owned independent bank.

In 1961, the bank's 76 year old president, Mr. A. O. Gates, and its Board of Directors, whose average age was 86 years, voted to refuse steadfastly to sell the bank until they found a banker who would carry their desire to maintain the tradition of a "home-owned bank for the people of Monterey County."

THE NEW BROOM WITH NEW POLICIES

The man they selected for the job was William A. Burkett of Pebble Beach, the retired Superintendent of Banks for the State of California, and a recognized friend of the State's small independent banks. After Mr. Burkett purchased 100% of the bank's stock from Mr. Gates and the Smith Estate, he spent the next six months personally visiting his customers—asking them and his friend, Mr. Gates, what they wanted in the way of an improved home-owned bank.

In October, 1961, Burkett assumed the Presidency of the little bank. First, he announced the new policies which had been agreed upon in advance by the old and new members of the board of directors and by the retiring president, A. O. Gates. The policy statement simply said:

"Desiring above all else to maintain a home-owned, independent bank to serve this beautiful, independent-minded Monterey Peninsula, this bank—effective today—will become the first bank in the State of California to break with traditional banking hours. Hereafter, this bank will be open on Saturday mornings and do a daily banking business from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

"The bank's name shall be changed to the Security National Bank of Monterey County and will join the Federal Reserve System, maintain the highest cash reserves, modern burglar alarm systems, maximum indemnity bonds, and the finest auditing controls and quality standards available. During the next five years, it will build several additional banking offices besides Pacific Grove, and extend moderately priced but conservative banking and trust department services to many additional customers on the Peninsula.

"But above all — this bank's watchword will be individual, kindly and attentive service and ours will be a bank dedicated to unselfish public service where every customer is important."

NATIONAL RECOGNITION TO BANK'S PRINCIPLES

There was a tremendous response to the bank's new policies of "customer hours and Saturday morning banking" instead of "bankers' hours." Over two thousand persons visited the Pacific Grove banking office on the first day that the policy was announced. The assets jumped from two million dollars to over 15 million dollars during the next 36 months, and over 14,000 customers opened new bank accounts. The Security National Bank became nationally recognized and written about in national banking journals as one of the most rapidly growing and unusual banks in the West.

During these past successful three years, competing shoulder to shoulder with 36 San Francisco banking offices located in the county has been a constant, stimulating challenge to Burkett and his staff which has now increased from five to 65 employees.

"We welcome the competition, in fact, we create it," said Burkett, who has set out to prove that independent banks can successfully compete with any of the large chain banks in this area. He believes that local ownership makes the difference. Ninety percent of the bank's stockholders are Peninsula residents.

Most recently, his bank was the pace setter in raising the savings account interest rates paid by banks on the Peninsula. He said his newest policy is paying off, judging from the new accounts being opened daily.

But Burkett is reluctant to take credit for the bank's success. He believes that the bank's policies rely on customer relationship, and he credits his employees with "reflecting the bank's kindly, homey attitude, and our good customers telling their friends."

The three New Year's greetings on his desk he treasures the most say: "My warmest congratulations on your bank's splendid progress and to a worthy successor of whom I am very proud," signed A. O. Gates. The other was a telegram from Upton Liptrott, Vice President of the American Banker in New York, congratulating the bank's recent 700% gain in deposits and resources, which stated: "Sincere congratulations on your spectacular gain of 1643 places in rank in one year among the nation's 5300 largest commercial banks." The third said simply, "To the best boss ever. Please don't work so hard," from your staff.

$200,000 new addition to Security National Bank's Pacific Grove office which opens January 4th on the bank's 76th anniversary.

A PROFILE OF THE BANKER-BUILDER

In their 24 years of married life, both Mr. and Mrs. Burkett have always worked as a team. They were both listed in Who's Who before they came to own the Security National Bank. Mrs. Burkett appears in Who's Who in American Women, and Mr. Burkett in Marquis' Who's Who in Business and Commerce, as well as in Who's Who in the West. He was first listed when 20 years old while an honor law student. It was 31 years ago when he first received national renown as the young author of the History of America to be carved on the granite mountainside of the Mt. Rushmore Memorial in the Black Hills.

It is therefore no accident that from his bank buildings the American Flag flies daily. His belief in public service lies deep within him. Both he and Mrs. Burkett have had American ancestors who have served in every American war including the American Revolution. His uncle served as a United States Senator and his great-grandfather, Judge John Franklin Williams, participated in the writing of California's Constitution.

The Burketts are active supporters of The California Historical Society, The Sons of California Pioneers and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Following Mr. Burkett's service as an Intelligence Officer in World War II, he served five years with the United States Treasury's Intelligence Unit. At 39, he was the first man Governor Goodwin Knight invited to serve in his Cabinet. His service included being Chairman of the State's Department of Investments, Chairman of the Employment Stabilization Commission, and Superintendent of Banks. His fellow Bank Commissioners of the then 48 states elected him their national President in 1958.

Burkett, who had attended the University of Nebraska, won a 3-year law school scholarship. He graduated with honors and took his first job in a large Los Angeles bank at the age of 23—a bank that later, when he was Superintendent of Banks, offered him one of its highest positions.

The Burkett family consists of one son, William C., and two daughters, Juliet Ann and Katherine. Juliet Ann, now Mrs. Rodman Hooker, followed in her mother's footsteps and attended Mills College and the University of Southern California. Katherine is a senior at Carmel High School, and young Bill is in the third grade.

FUTURE BANK PLANS VISION FREE ENTERPRISE

What is in the future for Security National? The answer might possibly be found somewhere in the hobby that both Mr. and Mrs. Burkett share. They both like sketching and designing early American and Victorian buildings. So far they have designed the Bank's present five buildings. The downtown Monterey main office and the New Monterey office are yet to be designed by them. They say that they have as much fun taking their day off together seeking antique furniture and designing bank buildings as they find that their retired friends do in playing golf and bridge.

So far they look only to 1965 with the bank's campaign theme which they have entitled the "Spirit of 76," in connection with the bank's 76 years of service and starting some new plans for the bank beginning January 4th. They are proud of the fact that all of their deposits are invested locally and that the bank has not foreclosed on any property in over 65 years. They associate their belief in the "Spirit of 76" with the story of initiative and the opportunities of the free enterprise system.

CARMEL BRANCH OPENING FEATURES OPEN HOUSE

To begin 1965 properly, Burkett said he will open not one, but two, new banking offices on the same day. At 10 a.m. January 4, the bank's new downtown Carmel branch at Ocean Avenue and Lincoln will open. This will be Carmel's first local independent bank to be established in Carmel in 41 years. The design of the Carmel Branch will be colonial, with rich walnut panelled interiors, a fireplace and antique furniture given to the Burketts by the Royal Bank of Scotland on their recent trip to Europe.

At 2 p.m., also on January 4, officials will preside at the ribbon-cutting ceremonies of the opening of the new Pacific Grove two-story addition. It is a gleaming grey and white pillared brick building of early Victorian architectural design. The $200,000 remodeling will encompass much of the architectural flavor of the previous Pacific Grove bank building, equipped with roll top desks, early Monterey area photos, antique furniture, and featuring a gaslit parking lot.

The public is invited to both of the January 4 celebrations. Refreshments will be served.

of the Sunset Committee. The 30 citizens selected represented a cross-section of the city's population. Frank Putnam was appointed chairman of this group.

For the first time, in June, Carmel High School seniors graduated on the campus in ceremonies held on the football field.

July

July started off with the community gathering, as usual, on Independence Day to set off fireworks on the beach following picnic suppers.

The Sunset Committee met in city hall for the first time and was charged by Mayor Blanks with planning the development and financing of a municipal cultural and community center on the Sunset School site.

July was the month in which the city council accepted the United Bank of California bid for the bonds to finance the $575,000 purchase of Sunset School. The bank offered the city a 3.12 rate of interest and paid a premium of $121. The interest, under the 20-year arrangement approved, meant the city will pay a total of $273,566.50 interest during this period. Plus the amount paid for the bonds to be properly handled, the total cost of the school purchase was revealed to be over $800,000.

On July 8, the council passed an emergency ordinance controlling auction sales in Carmel. Despite this, on July 15, an auction-type "public sales" business opened in Carmel. A series of legal moves and countermoves, did not prevent the business from operating until it chose to close in the Fall with plans to re-open in 1965.

The 27th annual Carmel Bach Festival opened its ten-day season on July 17. Monterey Peninsula College's new president, Dr. George R. Faul, arrived in July and he and his family became Carmel residents. This month, too, Dr. Robert Newton was re-elected president of the board of education of the Carmel Unified School District.

In July, property owners learned they would pay a school district tax of $2.57, up 24 cents from the year before, in order to finance the Carmel Unified School District's $2,280,462 budget.

The Carmel Citizens Committee sponsored a town meeting in July during which, for the first time, a heated discussion on annexation of areas adjacent to the city took place.

August

Following budget sessions, some of which went long past midnight, the city council, in August, pared the amount necessary to run the city for the coming fiscal year to $1,263,122 and set the city tax rate at $1.06, up 11½ cents from the previous year.

August was the month in which the city received from the bonding company, a check covering the $575,000 purchase of Sunset School, plus a bonus of accumulated interest amounting to $2,334.71. The total, $577,334.71 was put in the city's time deposit account to earn further interest until the date for payment to the school district should arrive.

In August, the Ford Foundation gave the Carmel school district a $4,000 grant to enable administrators and teachers to study school systems in the United States. This month, too, the board of education accepted the Hampshire Construction Co. bid of $161,908 to construct the large group teaching facility on the high school campus. The board also approved preparation of preliminary plans for an addition to Carmel Junior High School. This addition to be ready in September 1965, when the junior high will become a four-year intermediate school.

September

September was the month in which the city council received requests from residents of the Walker Tract, Mission Fields, the Mission Tract and Carmel Point for permission to circulate annexation petitions. The council referred the requests to the Carmel Planning Commission for study and report.

The planning and conservation committee of the commission held a meeting on this matter.

The Sunset Committee, in September, gave an interim progress report to the council which recommended that any municipal cultural and community center on the school site be developed by a non-profit group operating under a long-term lease with the city, and that this group later turn the center, unencumbered, over to the city. The council told the committee to "labor on."

Also in September, Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton were seen about town during the filming of an M-G-M picture "The Sandpiper" at Doud Beach; and the Security National Bank received approval of a branch in Pine Inn. School opened with an enrollment approximately the same as the year before in the Carmel district.

October

Carmel got a city forester, Hugh E. Smith, in October. He was appointed by the city council to make a detailed survey of the city's tree population, examine the condition of all trees, also prepare a map showing the forest resources of Carmel, reforestation needs, and needed tree care.

This month the Carmel Music Society opened its 38th season; the Monterey County Symphony its 19th season; both in Sunset auditorium.

The planning commission, in October, recommended to the council that, as far as planning and zoning was concerned, the council should approve annexation petition requests. The council accepted this report. The council, also, raised the hostelry tax to four percent effective January 1, 1965. Mayor Herbert Blanks vacationed in Mexico in October.

Admiral Fisher, president of the Citizens Committee, chose this month to make an urgent plea to the council to "Save Carmel."

During October, the board of directors of Carmel Foundation announced the purchase of Winona Lodge and that the nine units of this motel would be used for lower-priced housing for members of the foundation. The new project, they said, would be called Trevvett Court in honor of the late Mrs. Jane Egan Trevvett, honorary president of Carmel Foundation.

Robert Hoffman was elected president of the Carmel Seniors Club during this month.

November

On the first day of November, La Fiesta de San Carlos de Borromeo honoring the patron saint of Carmel Mission Basilica was revived after a lapse of 27 years. Hundreds of people gathered in the Mission courtyard for the event which included a barbecue and dancing to Mexican mariachi music. Harry Downie was named "El Capitan" at this affair.

November also saw Havic Corporation as the new owners of Carmel Rancho shopping center and discussion of Carmel Center, a new commercial development adjacent to the Rancho planned by William L. Hudson, Charles Fuller and Francis L. Brown for 33 acres across Highway One from Mission Fields.

In November, Mayor Blanks appointed Councilmen Eben Whittlesey and Stephen Grant as members of an ad hoc committee to study the social and economic conditions of annexing the areas in which some residents had indicated they wished to belong to Carmel. This committee, during November, held three meetings with residents of the areas in city hall.

The planning commission held a public hearing on the Monterey Peninsula Area Plan in November. Owners of large properties near Carmel were invited to this meeting, also to private meetings with the commission's planning and conservation committee. City planners, also in November, protested to the Monterey County Planning Commission about a proposed new subdivision, Carmel Views, to be located north of Rancho Rio Vista.

The finance subcommittee of the Sunset Committee, reported that a parking lot at the north end of the school site should be developed to help finance operation of a municipal cultural and community center.

In November, plans for a professional repertory theatre company to produce great plays received considerable impetus when Douglas Campbell, associated with the Shakespeare festival theatre group in Stratford, Ontario, and the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre in Minneapolis, arrived on the Peninsula. As artistic director of the Festival Theatre Foundation of California, founded by Peninsula residents, he spent five days talking with state and local community leaders. During his visit plans were announced for a 1,500-seat theatre on the Peninsula for this group and a six-month season of plays, also a campaign to raise $2,900,000 for the above purposes.

In November, the Church of the Wayfarer celebrated its 60th birthday and the Community Church announced the selection of the Reverend Burkert Cree as its first permanent minister at the first anniversary of this church's founding.

The Carmel High School varsity football team ended its season by defeating Pacific Grove in November and was declared co-champion of the Mission Trails Athletic Association.

Also in November, the Carmel Kiwanis Club gave $280 to the city to buy trees for the Junipero Avenue beautification project and Trevvett Court was formally opened.

December

On the first Sunday in December the third Great Sand Castle Contest drew 172 entries. Over a thousand people flocked to the beach for this community event. A sand replica of Mont St. Michel won the ribboned clam shell grand prize award.

The Suburban Council, in December, concerned itself with fire protection in the unincorporated areas and Mrs. Mildred Rives lost her life in a fire in Carmel Woods. Another fire, this month, destroyed a home on Hatton Fields Mesa.

The council's ad hoc committee, in December, recommended that Carmel Point be excluded from any annexation consideration. This recommendation was a result of the public meeting with Point residents. The committee, however, approved the request of residents in Mission Fields, the Walker and Mission Tracts, and on the edge of Hatton Fields Mesa to circulate annexation petitions. The council asked the city to draw up a resolution approving the circulation of such petitions by the residents of the respective areas;

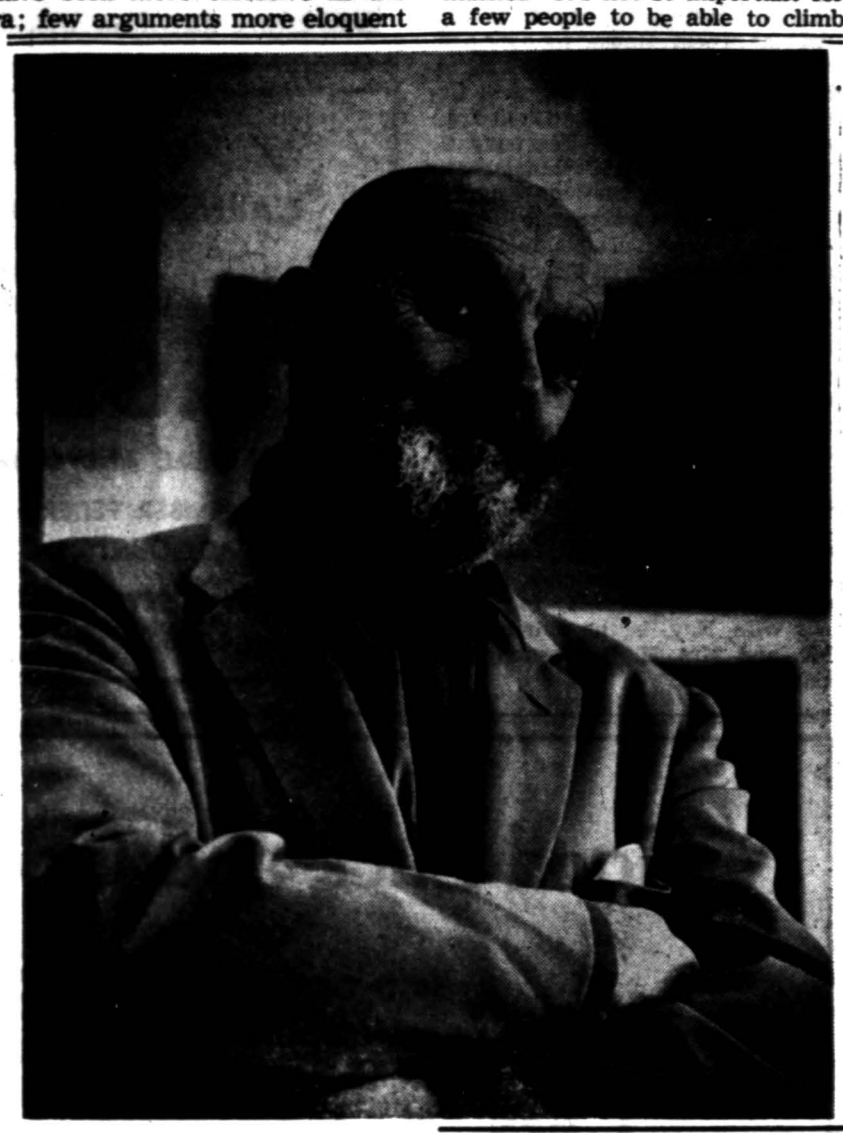
Ansel Adams Has Reservations About Methods Currently Being Used In The Conservation Battle

BY VIRGINIA SHAW

For over 50 years, Ansel Adams has been dedicated to preserving America's wilderness and creating awareness of the values of unspoiled nature. Few weapons have been more effective in the conservation battle than his camera; few arguments more eloquent than the artistry with which he has captured the space, light, and grandeur of the Sierra.



But despite his world-wide fame as a photographer, Ansel Adams cheerfully admits that as a conservationist, "A lot of people think I'm 'far out'!" Most of our citizens, he feels, regard nature largely as a curiosity. "They'll tear off to see geysers, mudpots, the highest this or the lowest that; but they think that anyone who wants to preserve a lot of rocks and trees is a bit potty."

Ansel Adams has invigorated the intellectual climate of the Peninsula since 1962, when he and his wife, Virginia, moved from San Francisco to a spacious studio home built for them in Carmel Highlands on a promontory with a sweeping view of the coastline. A joyous, Jovian giant whose very beard seems to bristle with electric energy, Adams is as exhilarating as a Sierra shower: one moment, all bounding activity punctuated by great woofs of laughter; the next moment serene and soft-voiced, bringing all the resources of keen perceptions and a well-stocked mind to a prodigious variety of interests. His enthusiasm for life and ideas, however, is tempered by a thoroughly practical nature. This is nowhere better demonstrated than in his attitudes toward the problems of conservation.

Since first becoming a director of the Sierra Club in 1936, Adams has "gone through several stages of great devotion to the idea of conservation"; but he has certain reservations about the methods currently being used to promote it. "The general attitude towards conservation has become increasingly belligerent," he feels. "To some extent, this is provoked by the "no-NO!" approach of conservationists themselves. In Northern California, Adams says, some lumbermen have actually been goaded into "vituperative cutting;" and conservationists' zeal to block the proposed Trans-Sierra Highway over Minaret Summit (through National Forest lands) resulted in the Tioga "freeway" through Yosemite Park, which "never should have happened."

"The real problem is that people simply don't like to be told what they can or can't do with their land," Adams says. "We've got to realize that people do have legal property rights, and encourage those who control land to realize that they have an obligation to the future. These people need to be given a sense of satisfaction and importance in preserving land for public use, or simply for its visual experience."

Locally, the Monterey Peninsula Council for Conservation and Planning (promoted by Peninsula Supervisor Tom Hudson) appears to Adams as a realistic solution to the preservation of private land for public enjoyment. Persuading landowners to dedicate portions of their land to greenbelt is, he feels, often a more politic alternative than attempting to force such lands through eminent domain. Taking as an example Stuyvesant Fish's Palo Corona Ranch south of Carmel River, Adams remarked "It's not so important for a few people to be able to climb around those hills, but it's terribly important for a lot of people to be able to look at them. What's most important here is the visual experience." Camping and trailer space is badly needed, he admits, and there are many areas of minimum scenic value and maximum accessibility — for instance, along the Monterey-Salinas Highway — where campsites could be developed properly and profitably. The Jack's Peak area, Adams feels offers particularly fine and scenic potentials.

The toughest problem, Adams believes, is the attitude of the public towards wilderness and scenic beauty. "The feeling most people have about wilderness is, 'Too bad it isn't being used.' The wilderness proponents want land preserved for their special enjoyment, but government feels everyone should be able to see it and wants to put roads into the wilderness. But when roads go in, the wilderness experience is lost."

The crisis of roads vs. conservation is currently at a head in Northern California, where the state wants to run highways through redwood groves and parklands. The dilemma here, Adams notes, lies in the legal provision that the state must put roads through state parks wherever possible, rather than acquiring private land.

The only long-range solution he sees is the development of a new philosophy toward the natural landscape. At present, Adams believes, we lack an esthetic conception of environment; most people are incapable of appreciating scenic beauty for the same reasons they cannot appreciate music, art, or poetry. He has been quoted as saying that "We are passing through an age of the denial of beauty." And until the public generally acquires appreciation of and responsibility to the natural landscape, "there'll still be 7,000 beer cans per mile along the highways after hunting season."

Last week, Ansel and Virginia Adams were keeping Christmas in a place which, more than any other, is most closely identified with their lives and Ansel's art: Yosemite. There, in 1916, Ansel Adams took his first pictures with a Box Brownie. There too, in 1928, he married the former Virginia Best, whose parents operated an early studio in the valley, and whose father, Harry C. Best, is now recognized as one of the leading Western landscape painters. (They met when Ansel was brought to the Best home to practice on their piano, one of the few in the valley, (he originally studied to be a concert pianist, and can still run off a Bach fugue as easily as a Polaroid print.) The Adamses' two children, Michael and Anne, were raised in Yosemite and married there as well. Virginia inherited the studio and gallery concession, and Yosemite has been the Adamses' second home throughout the years they lived in San Francisco and Ansel was establishing himself as a foremost artist and innovator in the field of photography.

A protege of the late great Alfred Steiglitz, Ansel Adams helped found the first department of photography at the Museum of Modern Art in New York (where he has taught, lectured, and had frequent exhibits) as well as the photography department at the California School of Fine Arts. His experiments with film and developing resulted in a series of basic photo books which constitute a definitive text on photographic technique. Among the many books and portfolios of his work is the beautiful "This Is The American Earth," originally produced with Nancy Newhall as an exhibit for the Sierra Club; with Mrs. Newhall he also collaborated on "A Nation of Nations," inaugural exhibition of the Kongresshalle, Berlin, for the United Nations Information Agency. He has been honored by countless institutions and organizations, receiving two Guggenheim Awards and an honorary doctorate from the University of California. His work has been exhibited in galleries and museums throughout America and the world; a major one-man show which originated a year ago at the de Young Museum in San Francisco has been circulated nationwide by the Smithsonian Institution, culminating this Fall with a showing in the gallery of the Department of the Interior—the first time any artist has been so honored.

On Christmas Day, Ansel Adams was playing a role he has long delighted in: that of majordomo for the traditional Bracebridge Dinner at Ahwanee Lodge. He has directed the medieval pageant of Bracebridge since 1930, and conceived most of its text and music; on occasion, he has even donned cap and bells to play the role of the Jester in the pageant itself. After Christmas, the Adamses returned home for still another tradition: New Year's Day open house for their multitude of friends.

A New Year's resolution might be built from Ansel Adams' credo, as quoted by Nancy Newhall in the first book of her two-volume biography of Adams, "The Eloquent Light": "I believe in growing things and in things which have grown and died magnificently. I believe in people, and in the simple aspects of human life, and in the relation of man to nature. I believe man must be free, both in spirit and society, that he must build strength into himself, affirming 'the enormous beauty of the world' and acquiring the confidence to see and express his vision."

Spring Fashion Shows

Commencing on Wednesday, the Studio Theatre-Restaurant, where luncheon is served daily except Mondays, will present a showing of Footlights and Fancy Fashions, when star models of the area will stroll across the stage showing what fashion-wise leading ladies, debutantes and dowagers, hostesses and gadabouts will be wearing through the early months of 1965.

The fashion promenades will be held during the lunch hour, 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., on the first and third Wednesdays of every month. Tables may be reserved for groups.

'A Champion Christmas'

Ruth Marion McElroy, whose house on San Antonio is for old-time Carmelites a home always filled with merriment, had what she termed "a champion Christmas." Her daughter Anne McElroy Fry arrived from Los Angeles on Christmas Eve with her children, Noel, who celebrated her eleventh birthday on December 23, and Roberta who is thirteen years old. Anne had to return to Los Angeles the day after Christmas, but returned to Carmel again, today, to stay through the long weekend.

New Town House Classes

On Wednesday Carl Bensberg will show colored slides of English gardens taken on his recent visit to England. There will be identical showings at 1:30 and 2:30 p.m. Tea will be served following the program and the public is invited.

Three new classes, knitting, physical fitness and music appreciation have been added to the regular Town House program. Starting dates are January 5, knitting, 2 to 4 p.m.; physical fitness, January 21, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.; music appreciation, February 1, 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Shuffleboard sessions will resume on January 14. For further information about these and other classes telephone Carmel Foundation Town House office 624-1588.

PINE INN

A EUROPEAN PLAN HOTEL

Carmel-by-the-Sea, California

Cheerful, clean, urbane are just mild descriptives of a captivating stay at "The INN." Carmel's highly individual charm surrounds this historic landmark, sloping toward the sea.

The quaint Cocktail Lounge is 'antiquity with fireplace,' the friendly persuasion for New Year's celebrants.

Add a pinch of gayety to this hearty experience and gourmets agree that dining at the Pine Inn is good taste for 1965.

Ruth Anderson adds to the fun with her characterization of "Franny." Winston Sargent brings his talents to the role of the Hollywood agent. "Goodbye Charlie" is being directed by Roy Baxter.

The Past Year In Carmel

council action on this to take place in January, 1965.

Ted Durein was elected president of the Bach Festival board of directors in December and Francis P. Lloyd was appointed to the board.

The Carmel Unified School Board announced the names of persons selected to serve on the citizens advisory committee to study and recommend on improvements in the district's education program. This committee held its organizational meeting on December 17 with Trustee Roxana Blanks as chairman. The last Christmas play took place at Sunset School on December 17.

However, in December another Carmel tradition was revived when the Carmel Youth Center sponsored a community tree-lighting ceremony during which the Carmel High School choir sang carols and Mayor Blanks gave a Yuletide message to Carmelites. The Youth Center also presented its annual Christmas Capers as a gift to the community.

The planning and conservation committee of the planning commission, as a result of meetings with owners of large properties, stated that the area plan could be a threat to the economic value of land belonging to these property owners. Following this report, the commission decided to consider this report further in January and to ask State Senator Fred Farr and county and area plan officials to meet with them.

Planners also approved a building permit for a new theatre and shop complex to be located at the corner of Seventh and Dolores on the present Nielsen Bros. parking lot.

Carl Bosholm was elected president of the Carmel Business Association during the last month of the year. He already was the 1964 chairman of the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mr. Bosholm announced that one of his objectives as president of the business association would be to try to establish a liaison between businessmen and residents for the benefit of Carmel.

Mike Williams Born

The rainbow which arched across Carmel Valley just before sunset on Sunday may have been a promise to Michael John Williams that the world into which he was waiting to be born might not always be rain-drenched. Later in the evening he gladdened the hearts of his parents, Johnny and Lucinda Williams, with his arrival at the Community Hospital at 10:36 p.m. His birth weight was eight pounds, two and a half ounces and he was 22 inches tall.

Mike has a sister, Anna, who is 22 months old. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Williams of Carmel Valley and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lloyd of Carmel.

His aunt, Kate Williams, who came home for Christmas from Phoenix, Arizona, saw her nephew before she flew back on Monday. The same day, another aunt, Mardi Morse, and her husband, Sam, arrived in Carmel from San Luis Obispo to congratulate Mike's parents and see him nestled in his bassinet. Yesterday, his uncle, Francis P. (Skip) Lloyd, arrived back in Carmel from Los Angeles with his wife, Sue, and Mike's cousins, Peter and Lesley Lloyd, with greetings for the new member of the family.

Others who welcomed Mike this week were a third aunt, Jennefer Baylis, her husband, Nat, and two more cousins, Owen and Lloyd Baylis, all of Menlo Park.

Today Mike and his mother went home to live in the house built by Mike's great-grandfather, the late Will Martin, whose marriage to Anna Hatton united two Carmel Valley pioneer families. Because of this union, Mike is now a fifth generation Carmel Valley resident.

Home From Greenland

The Niels Reimers home at Carmelo and Ocean rang with welcome on Christmas Eve upon the arrival of Gunnar Reimers, an engineer with the Philco Corporation, who has been in Thule, Greenland, working for the U.S. Air Force. Gunnar says that he will be at home with his father for a while before taking off on another engineering project for Philco. Probable locations are Hawaii or Africa.

Mr. and Mrs. Niels Reimers Jr. arrived on Christmas Eve, too, from Palo Alto, bringing their son, six-weeks-old Niels III, for his first visit to his grandfather's home.

Desert Holiday

The William A. Burkett family has been having a holiday at Palm Springs Tennis Club but will be back in their Pebble Beach home in time for Mr. Burkett, president of Security National Bank, to welcome the public on Monday when the Carmel branch of the bank opens.

The Burketts were joined in Palm Springs by their elder daughter, Julie, and her husband, Rodman Hooker, who live in Beverly Hills. Rod is the son of Mrs. Kenneth Walker of Pebble Beach and the grandson of Samuel F. B. Morse.

Report From Hawaii

Home in time for Christmas, Mr. and Mrs. Adolf Lafrenz, during three weeks in Hawaii, saw many of their friends in the Carmel colony there.

They brought back Christmas and New Year greetings to Carmel and the Valley from Peggy Porter Morrow who proudly showed them her dramatic little shop, "The Gallery" on the island of Maui. Mrs. Evelyn Wilkinson was equally proud of her sports shop at Maui.

Herb and Ollie Brooks of Carmel Valley fame are, as usual, in a whirl with Herb involved in real estate and Ollie a tour director.

The Thompson McCreas, established in their new apartment in the much publicized condominium of 2,200 apartments, "The Ilikai" in Honolulu, were their usual convivial and hospitable selves. They expect to be back in Carmel on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lafrenz sailed to Hawaii on the Lurline, "Four and a half days of relaxation and fun," they told, "And we flew back in four and a half hours!"

They were off again, on Christmas Eve, for Piedmont, where they were the guests of Mrs. Lafrenz's nephew and niece, the William Mitchells. On Christmas day they dined with Mrs. Robert McBride of Woodside and on Saturday they attended the wedding of Miss Vicki Andrews of Piedmont and Mrs. Lafrenz's grand-nephew, Lieutenant William Mitchell, USAF. The wedding was one of the outstanding social events of the Bay area.

New Book A Success

Although their daughter, Ciji, didn't get home for the holidays, the Harlan Wares have had much to celebrate. Harlan's book, a biographical portrait of Ernest Holmes, Ph.D., founder of the Church of Religious Science, and titled "The Inner Light," also written in collaboration with Dr. William H. D. Hornaday, was published by Dodd, Mead on November 16 with a second printing on November 17. Enthusiastic reviews across the country won the volume an enviable record of sales in the Christmas gift category.

Ciji's career in the theatre is a second success story. Since October when the play opened on Broadway earning rave reviews, Ciji has been understudy for two major roles in Julius La Rosa's "Kiss Mama." She is also appearing on the TV program, "International Showtime."

Mr. and Mrs. Ware left Carmel yesterday, bound for Pasadena. Mrs. Ware will return to Carmel next week, but Mr. Ware will start from Pasadena on a lecture tour related to his new book.

Parties At The Nietos

Christmas in the August Nieto home, with its glittering tree and mountains of gifts, was a joyous family affair. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Philbin (Margaret Nieto), with their two children, Johnny and Kevin, arrived from San Jose on Christmas Eve. The William McCormacks (Katherine Nieto) of Carmel, were there, too, with their small daughter Elizabeth.

On Sunday the Nietos held their annual pinata party for their grandchildren and their little friends in the neighborhood. The rains held up just long enough for the party to be held on the patio, much to the delight of the youngsters.

A third celebration in the Nieto home was held yesterday, celebrating August's birthday. With cocktails at sundown, innumerable friends toasted the host, and many went on to the Elks Club for dinner and to greet the New Year.
